

Kids don't come with an owner's manual. There is information and support to help you. Parenting can be a rewarding experience.

Help for Parents

Parenting is easy.... until you have children, or that is how the saying goes. Well meaning friends and family are quick to lend advice to a new parent who may be struggling in their new role. One thing to keep in mind is that this is your child, and he or she is like no other child in this world. Parenting whether you are alone or co-parenting can be a stressful and lonely position. It can also be very rewarding and fun.

Things You Can Do

Parenting tips and helpful hints on how to reduce the stress of parenting:

- Know that every child grows and develops in their own way and understanding the ages and stages will assist you in helping your child at each and every milestone
- Having the knowledge of age-appropriate behavior will help you to better prepare for what might come next, and not to expect too much from them too soon
- Prepare for the next day the evening before, to reduce stress
- Learn to say "No"
- Let your children help with the little things

Alternatives to saying no!

- Yes (with a condition)
- Give me a minute
- Convince me

Take a Parenting Course:

A parenting course can be helpful for many reasons. We tend to find out we are not alone in the concerns or struggles that we have. Having an evening to share with other parents can be beneficial to your relationship with both your child(ren) and your spouse. Every small thing you learn gives you a new tool. Learning your style of parenting and how that can click with your partners' style is just one of the ways a course can be helpful to you.
